

Unscientific Lectures

Autumn 2016

Oct 25 at E-Puben
Niklas Zechner on
Lemur Languages

in which John Cleese has something in common with the founder of Intel, and the truth about Halloween is revealed

Nov 24 at E-Puben
Jonatan Klaminder on Multidisciplinary Research

in which the first earthworm arrives in Sweden, and fish take drugs to overcome their anxiety NB: Thursday.

Nov 1 at Origo
Folmer Bokma on Darwinism

in which genetic revolutions create hopeful monsters, and we learn why most birds are small

Nov 29 at E-Puben
Eva Selstam on Bonsai

in which small things come to those who wait, and bigger is definitely not always better

Nov 8 at E-Puben
Christer Nordlund on the Neuro Hype

in which Frankenstein changes his mind, and no brain is an island

Dec 6 at Origo Lars-Daniel Öhman on Guessing

in which gnomes face getting eaten by dragons and prisoners face execution, but are saved by cooperation

Nov 15 at Origo
Markus Hällgren on Boredom

in which parties are held on Mount Everest, and amusement is the key to survival

Dec 13 at E-Puben
Sebastian Sjöquist on Space Exploration

in which we do an extraterrestrial Google search, and little bits of Umeå go to the moon

At E-Puben: 16:15, free fika for student union members.

At Origo: 18:15, food and drinks available for purchase.

Free of charge. All welcome.

UMEÅ STUDENTKÅR

For more information, see <http://www.ntk.umu.se/unscientificlectures>